

King County Regional

Trusted Partner Network

A step toward equity in disaster response

Community volunteers needed!

- Are you passionate about community safety?
- Are you connected and trusted in your community?
- Are you able to use a smartphone and email?
- Do you read and speak English? Are you bilingual?
- Can you spend 15 minutes a month to share important emergency information with your community?

If you answered yes to these, consider joining the Trusted Partner Network!

For more information, go to www.kingcounty.gov/TPN.

For questions, please contact TPN@kingcounty.gov

Become a Trusted Partner

Community members trained in the Trusted Partner Network will convey urgent public messages and necessary immediate information regarding natural and man-made disasters or other emergencies to their community.

What Makes A Trusted Partner?

Bi-lingual recommended.

Ability to use a smartphone.

Connected and trusted within community.

Ability to get information to people in your language group or other group.

Willingness to partner with government.

Passionate about community safety.

How Do Trusted Partners Help?

1. Receive emergency alerts and disseminate these alerts in a cultural/language appropriate manner to their communities through relevant communication channels (social media, text threads, email, etc.)
2. Report, as needed, essential information about your community's situation, including requests for needed resources, to your local city jurisdiction or King County during emergency incidents and drills. You can help with emergency response and recovery by being the "eyes and ears" for your community.

How To Get Involved:

Go to kingcounty.gov/TPN and complete steps 1-4 under the section titled "How do I get involved?" (scan the QR code to access the site). Or email TPN@kingcounty.gov with a message of interest. For further questions, contact Aniya Beck – King County Office of Emergency Management at TPN@kingocunty.gov.

DATA DISCLAIMER: As community members, the contact information you provide, such as personal emails, cell phone numbers, etc. is not subject to release. Responding to an official TPN alert remains a private communication system: receiving alerts and/or responding to them will not compromise the privacy of your contact information or address.
